BOSTON MORNING POST.

TUESDAY, JUNE 14, 1836.

The following letter bears the same date with the one we published last week; it came to hand but a day or two since. It will be found interesting.

Correspondence of the Boston Morning Post.

The Austrian brig Ambrogeo, which vessel sailed from Boston on the 7th of March, arrived in our quarantine harbor in the remarkably short passage of twenty-seven days. This circumstance is deserving of a passing notice inasmuch as by reference to the Custom-House books, we find there was never but one shorter passage, which was that of the ship Sally Ann, some years since—being only three weeks and a half, from the period of her discharging her pilot in the United States, until she was piloted to our anchorage-ground in Marsamcleto. The average pas-forty days.

Within these few days the English Steamer Essex has arrived here from England, and left for her destination at the Dardanelles, where she is to remain, to be employed in towing ships through this, at many times, tedious and narrow passage.

It not unfrequently happens, that vessels have been detained from one to three months, being stopped by the strong currents and continual northerly gales, from passing through into the sea of Marmora. Some seven years since, I recollect the Hope, of Salem, was at anchor on this Turkish town of the Boudaekles, for forty-two days awaiting a favorable wind; but a more remarkable instance occurred some few months since, in that of an English brig, which was bound to Constantinople, and was reported by a schooner which passed through on her way to London, as being off Gallipoli, bound up. This vessel made her passage and returned, and still found the brig at anchor, and after being detained some few days more, they both passed through with the same southerly gale.

The establishing of a line of steam tow-boats, at the Dardanelles, is a circumstance not uninteresting to the American merchants; one of the greatest drawbacks heretofore, to the increase of the commerce at Constantinople, was the detention which vessels might meet with at the entrance of these narrow straits. Merchantmen can now be towed through in a few hours, and at a moderate charge.

We have recently had several arrivals from the Agents of Turkish Consuls, requesting information as to the of Tripoli, bringing some important information. The Pacha, who was sent from Constantinople during the last summer, with several thousand Turkish soldiers, to take possession of the town, has not only proved himself an able military commander, but also a politician worthy of the name. He has succeeded in making the tribes in the interior fight among themselves, thereby weakening them and strengthening his own power. The Sultan may now be said to be in perfect possession of this Agency, which has so long been the scene of barbarities and crimes of the most atrocious and heinous description.

Within the last year the executions at Tripoli have not been at all infrequent. It was only the last month, that a chief, who was captured while fighting against the Sultan's army, was taken within the walls of the town, and immediately

From this it would appear, that not only freedom of speech but also of thought was forbidden in this ill-fated portion of the country."

The New York Herald urges the Police on to the most active exertions in endeavoring to detect the murderer of Ellen Jewett—it says—

"Let the whole inmates, male and female, permanent or temporary, be put under instant arrest. Let Rosina Townsend be caged at once. The murderer must be sought and discovered. The pale and ghastly face of Ellen Jewett is remembered, and

But not only is the murderer yet to be discovered: the wicked and atrocious conspiracy to take away the life of an innocent youth, whose only crime was his morbid genius, his soft beauty, his budding talent, calm courage, and his supposed obscurity of situation—this bloody and unnatural conspiracy must not pass away till it be thoroughly unriddled and revealed."

The Herald intimates that it knows, and will so divulge, some startling facts relative to the vice of New York—bids the people prepare for the "awful expose," and winds up by recommending Gen. Sam Houston as a candidate for the Presidency of the United States.

The French papers make themselves somewhat in ry at the notice the English bestow upon the death the Duke of Wellington's Waterloo horse, which be his Grace, the latter say, for sixteen hours during the hottest of the battle. Monsieur is of opinion that the battle could not have been very hot where the Duke was, if he and his horse escaped for sixteen hours without injury.

Miss Along Moy is in Philadelphia, urging King Eudle to establish an "Agency" in the Celestial Empire. Nick is a little coy.

There is a period of our history, and a locality, fertile beyond others in romantic incident, moving accidents, and exultations of the strong, the dark, the splendid, or the noble traits of human nature: a region and a time which has exhibited the basest and the most godlike attributes of humanity in full exercise, in glaring contrast, untrammelled by the restraints (whether upon vices or virtues) of a colder temperament, a less genial sun. We refer to the storied bayous, passes, lakes and secluded haunts about the mouths of the Mississippi; where have been laid the plots of many a bloody drama; the scenes of many a tale of the "wild and the wonderful." We refer to that exciting and eventful period when a foreign invader in an evil hour dared to plant his mercenary legions upon our soil, and with bayonets yet unquelled, arrogantly pressed forward to force the lock which guards that vast and fertile virgin valley, fast filling with teeming myriads of happy homes and free hearts. The occasion of the defence of New Orleans, separate from the salvation wrought out for us by it, was a matter of startling moment, a crisis of tremendous consequence, whether we regard the immediate effect upon the inhabitants who would have exchanged British for American civilization, or its ultimate consequences to the millions upon millions who are to dwell amid the abundance of that teeming world of fertility, watered by the father of streams and his long-armed children. What a sublime spectacle for the assembled world, when those mercenary legions, flushed with success, led on by the bravest of the brave, fell heaps upon heaps of horrid laughter, before the untrained freemen of the West, their glory quenched in blood, their strongest and proudest quailing and blenching away before an arm nerved by that fixed determination to be free, invincible but by Omnipotence! These reflections are suggested by a glance at a new work, (just issuing by the Harpers, from the popular pen of Prof. Ingraham.) "Lafitte, or the Pirate of the Gulf," whose scenery, incidents and characters all start out, and play their busy, bloody parts on that enchanted ground of United States History, still the theatre of stirring marvels. It is well that the youthful patriot's eye should be often turned to the spots where were the hottest struggles for their birth-right, and to those who have tasted the delightful spirit of good will to all, the beauty, the life, the richness of Prof. Ingraham's "Southwest, by a Yankee," it is superfluous to promise a piquant treat in the "Pirate of the Gulf." The victorious and illustrious general, the estimable commodore who won unfading wreaths at New Orleans, move, with other important characters of that time and place, amid the evanescent conjured from the past by this judicious and patriotic novelist; who has well and nobly accomplished, in this his intensely affecting drama, that difficult task of throwing the fascinating garb of romance over historic events which have scarcely passed from the domain of the contemporary newspaper. Indeed, the author has been completely successful by his truth-drawn characters, well-laid plot, variety of startling incident, and a tender, well-told tale of love, inwoven amid the din of arms, in riveting our interest to his truly American production. Often and long may this pen, which can so dexterously seize and exhibit the striking points of moral as well as natural scenery, and this intellect, which, while it flashes in well-tempered wit, or plays in goodnatured satire, can invent, combine, and utilize its precious musings;—often and long may they exercise themselves in the enviable sphere Prof. I. has attained; bringing the distant brethren of our common father-land intimately, amiably, and pleasantly acquainted, even to the hearty shaking of hands; bringing also the children to interest themselves in the deeds of their glorious fathers; and, best of all, awaking all human sympathies with the fallen or unfortunate, unsealing the fountain of love to all that is tender, true, generous, suffering, or great, in our common nature; and pointing out to abhorrence the villain, the knave, and the slave of vice in all its forms. M.

Fourth of July Celebration.—Arrangements are in progress by the Democratic Republicans of Boston to celebrate the Fifty-ninth Anniversary of American Independence, in a manner appropriate to the occasion. The procession will be formed at the State House, and proceed under escort to Faneuil Hall, where a dinner will be provided, and an address pronounced. The Committee, having nearly completed their arrangements, will soon publish their programme. In the mean time, they invite their Republican brethren, friendly to the National Administration, throughout the Commonwealth, to join with them in the festivities of the day.

The last number of the New York Mirror is a plate number. The plate is a distant view of Mount Tom, near Northampton, in this State, painted by Richardson, and engraved by Osborne. The fourteenth volume of the Mirror will commence on the second of July, and the arrangements which have been made to give additional interest and value to its columns, are unprecedented in the literary history of this country. A series of papers from abroad will be furnished by Mr. Fay, who will write for no other journal during his absence. The proprietor of the Mirror is what we call a "prodigal son," for he expends all the profits of the work in beautifying its pages. Mr. Holmes, at the Post Office, is the Agent for this city.

One of the squaws of the friendly Indians, who was taken prisoner by Osceola, has escaped and returned to Fort Drane. She says Osceola expressed a great contempt for the mode of warfare pursued by our troops. "The Indian," he said, "marched ten miles before breakfast, and lies down to sleep;" the trumpets in the advance and the rear of the white enemy, and his heavy military train, heralds his slow approach, and the Indian speeds in time to his covert. The woman states, also, that the plan of Osceola's summer campaign is to besiege Fort King, defended by about 200 men, and, by cutting off supplies, to starve them out; and then to take and burn Fort Drane, which is occupied by about the same force as Fort King.

The Democratic and Anti-Masonic Republicans of Plymouth County, will celebrate the coming anniversary of American Independence at South Scituate, Mass. An oration will be pronounced by R. Rantoul, Jr. Esq. of Gloucester.

CONGRESS.
The House sat all Thursday night, and until 11 o'clock on Friday morning, in Committee of the Whole, on the bills for the admission of Michigan and Arkansas into the Union, which were finally reported to the House. The House then adjourned to Saturday.

In the Senate on Friday, a message was received from the President, giving his reasons for withholding his signature from the bill appointing a day for the annual meeting of Congress. [The President thinks the latter part of the bill, fixing the adjournment of every succeeding Congress on the second Monday in May, unconstitutional.] The army and deposit bills were considered—the former was re-committed, but no action was had on the latter.

New Hampshire.—A Democratic State Convention assembled at Concord on Thursday. Hon. Jonathan Harvey, President; Hon. Jonathan Nye, and Hon. John Chadwick, Vice Presidents; Benaiah Cook, and Edmund Burke, Esqrs., Secretaries; and resulted in the following nominations:—For Governor, Isaac Hill; for Electors, Jonathan Harvey, Isaac Waldron, Tristram Shaw, Stephen Gale, Josiah Russell, Gaven Gilmore, Ebenezer Carleton; for Members of Congress, Samuel Cushman, James Farrington, Charles G. Atherton, Joseph Weeks, Jared W. Williams.

Judge White's vote in favor of Mr Clay's Land Bill, is doing his business for him pretty essentially in the new States. How much favor his Nullification will gain for him here, will be seen by the support received by his locum tenens, Daniel Webster.

Brother Chandler has a very neat way of doing things—for example:—

"A friend and old subscriber suspended his subscription a few days since, because his neighbors borrowed the paper before he could read it, and did not return it until his time for reading was gone. 'I did not mind this so much,' says our friend, who is a grocer, 'so long as they sent the paper in a situation to be used as a wrapper, because the sheet is so large that it is worth a good deal for that purpose; but recently, the number of our door readers has so multiplied, that the Gazette is returned in a very unavailable state.'"

"Waste and Desert."—The tolls upon the New York Canals during the month of May, exceeded, by more than twenty thousand dollars, the amount ever received from them during the same month any previous year.

The Bunker-Hill Aurora will sell a few outstanding debts at auction on the fourth of July, unless the delinquents "call at the cap'n's office and settle," prior to that time.

The New York Whigs have nominated Jesse Buell for Governor, and Gamaliel H. Barstow for Lt. Governor. Noah says they will carry the State—will he back his word with a basket of wine?

Dr Cantwell, of the New York Commercial, says "THEATRES ARE THE VESTIBULES OF HELL"—Anson Herrick, late of the Bangor Advertiser, now non est inventus, was of the same opinion with "Col. Stun."

Three children were born on board the steamer Royal Tar, during her last passage from St. Johns to Eastport—the boat struck on Mount Desert Rock, and frightened the passengers out of six of their seven senses.

The child residing with a poor woman in the Five Points, which the New York Sun affirms to be one of Lord Segrave's illegitimate sons, may or may not be so; but I doubt, with you, whether the ci-devant Miss Foote can be the mother. Her children, by Lord S. are under his care, residing at Cheltenham, under the pupillage of a governess. Lady Harrington has been in Cheltenham lately, but Lord S. gave strict orders that she should have no access to her children. Nevertheless, she did continue to see them, and that, too, with her husband's consent. Lord Segrave's present mistress is the wife of Bunn, of Drury Lane Theatre; and he allows her husband a handsome annuity on condition that he is courteous and quiet.—Noah's Liverpool Correspondent.

A Singular Coincidence.—During the trial of Robinson, several panes of glass in the windows of the Court room were broken by the pressure of the crowd in the room; and singular as it may appear, the outline of the break in one of the panes presents the perfect profile of a female head and neck, the features coarse, but uniform, the hair done up, and secured by a comb in the usual manner. The profile is about the size of life, and could not have been cut out with a diamond more perfectly than it appears. The broken pane has not been removed, and the "strange woman" may be seen by any person standing in the rear of the west wing of the hall.—N. Y. Sun.

Ransom Clark, one of the two men who escaped from the massacre of Dade's detachment, at Oulha-chee, is said to be a native of this State. His right arm is dislocated, and five bullets are in different parts of his body, rendering him incapable of ever doing any thing for his support. We hope that his case will meet with consideration, and something be done for the man, disabled in fighting for the safety of his countrymen.—He is on his way to his family and friends in this State.—N. Y. Star.

Prospects.—We regret to learn, that the wheat fields in almost every direction, present a most melancholy prospect—the worm has been busy with the young stock, and decay is so obvious, that the whole harvest of many immense fields will scarcely return the amount of seed used in sowing. This intelligence comes to us from many counties in the vicinity of our city, from Delaware State, Maryland, and different parts of Virginia.—Phil. (U. S.) Gaz.

The Grand Jury of Frederick County, Maryland, have presented the Constitution of that State as an unsupportable nuisance. The reason assigned is, that it is anti-republican, placing all political power in the hands of a lean majority of the whole people, so that the will and wishes of seven thousand voters in Frederick are completely balanced by the votes of seven hundred in a different county.

MUNICIPAL COURT.
George Washington Dixon's Forgery Case.—The indictment against Dixon, contained three counts, alleging in various forms that Dixon had uttered a forged order, in the name of John Freidham, and obtained thereby from William C. Martin, the sum of $23.50, on the 23d of May last. The order was signed "J. I. Freidham," and was tendered by Dixon to Mr Martin, in the presence of Mr Thomas Barrett, as the genuine order of John Freidham. It was not pretended, on the trial, that Mr Freidham signed such an order, but the defence rested on other grounds, growing out of a long train of circumstances connected with the transaction. The principal facts were as follows:—After a tremendous trumpeting, puffing, advertising, and flourishing of show bills, for a month, more or less, Dixon gave a Grand Vocal and Instrumental Soirée (or sore eye, as it is said he pronounces that Gallician and barbarous term)—at the Masonic Temple, on the 30th of April last. Dixon's share of the receipts was to be about one-third, which he attempted to keep out of the clutches of the trustee process, by collusively assigning his interest in the Concert to Freidham, for the absurdly extravagant sum of two hundred dollars. A bill of sale or order to this effect was given by Dixon to Freidham, who presented it to Mr Martin, the door-keeper and receiver of the money paid for tickets at the door. Meantime a trustee process had issued in behalf of Mr Barrett for 25 dollars, and Martin, believing that the transfer to Freidham was not genuine, declined paying the proceeds over to him, but retained it in his hands to meet the judgment in favor of Mr Barrett's suit, if he should recover on the trustee suit. Things remained in statu quo, till the 23d of May, when Dixon and Barrett called upon Martin with the following forged order:—

"Boston, May 23d, 1836.
Mr Martin pay to Mr Dixon the money you have on hand received at the Concert in the Temple on the 30th of April J. I. Freidham"

Dixon had given Mr Barrett to understand, that he had obtained this order from Freidham, and it therefore appeared to Mr Martin, that all three of the claimants of the money in chancery were duly represented, either in person, or by sign manual, and he unhappily paid Mr Barrett $9.00, on the suit, and gave Dixon the balance. On the 27th, Freidham, who professed to have a legal claim to the money, or at least a part of it, asked Mr Martin when the business was to be settled. Mr Martin replied, that he had settled it by paying his order. Mr Freidham opened his eyes preternaturally, drew a long breath, denied that he had ever given such an order, and presto! it was not long before poor Dixon was under convoy of veteran Reid.

Six witnesses to Dixon's general character were examined, and they testified that he was a harmless, gentlemanly, and inoffensive man, but unfortunate and destitute of business capacity. One witness, more anxious to save, than flatter him, said, in reply to a question, asked by Mr Parker, whether Dixon was non compos, "I consider him as being on the frontier line—sometimes on one side, and sometimes on the other, just as the breeze of fortune happens to blow." The witness also related an anecdote, where Dixon once desired the steam-press to be kept idle, till the proof-sheet of his morning paper, the "Sun," could be corrected on the press; but the superintendent of the presses insisted upon his removing the forme from the press, and advised him, after correcting it at his office, to publish it in the evening and call it the Moon.—Mr Hallett, his counsel, also read a statement, from which it appeared, that Dixon was the son of a gentleman, of Fredericksburg, Va., who was a member of the Legislature of that State. It also states that he received a good English education, and a smattering of Latin, but having rare musical talents, he cultivated his vocal powers, more than classical literature. He was once in the War-office, at Washington, but afterwards betook himself to the stage, as a vocalist. He has also edited sundry papers in Connecticut, Rhode Island, and Massachusetts, but was eminently unsuccessful in all of them.

He was ably, zealously, and most feelingly defended by B. F. Hallett, Esq., whose main argument was, that the money, being Dixon's, he had not actually committed any fraud, though he had committed a serious indiscretion in using a false paper to obtain it. This indiscretion he imputed to his utter deficiency of business knowledge and tact. Many other points were made by Mr Hallett, and ingenious technical suggestions advanced, but not probably of much force apart from the strong defence cited above.

S. D. Parker, Esq., for the prosecution, contended that so far as Dixon was concerned, the money belonged to Freidham by the original understanding between the parties, inasmuch as Freidham was to have half of the entire receipts, and afterwards became responsible for all the expenses, when the transfer of the proceeds was made to him; and though the transfer was fraudulent towards Dixon's creditors, yet it was perfectly valid between him and Freidham.

A singular scene took place at the conclusion of Judge Thacher's charge, when the Foreman of the Jury wanted to know whether Friedham had not collected some money for tickets at other places than the door on the evening of the Concert. A skirmish between the counsel followed the suggestion of the Foreman, which ended in Friedham's being recalled, when lo and behold! it appeared by his own statement that he had collected at least fourteen dollars at different places.

This changed the complexion of the case entirely, and when it was stated, and witnesses were ready to swear to it, that Dixon had given away a large number of tickets, every body in the court was pretty well convinced that the money did in honor and conscience belong to him, instead of Friedham. A conviction also prevailed throughout the court house that Friedham had wrongfully concealed the fact of the $14.00, on his regular examination.

The jury were only out three or four minutes, when they returned with a verdict of Not Guilty, which was received by a general burst of applause, for which the spectators were properly reprimanded by his honor.

POLICE COURT.—Store Breaking.—A lad named Benjamin Parks, and but seventeen years of age, was arraigned on complaint of watchman Stoddard, charging him with breaking and entering the store of Messrs Cotton, Hill & Cotton, No. 46, Central wharf. About ten minutes before 9 on Sunday evening, Lynden and Jordan, the Central wharf watchmen, discovered the back door of the store open, and soon after saw Parks come out, and they then arrested him. He told them, that his handkerchief had dropped through the window of the cellar, and in going down after it he fell down into the cellar, and could not get back by the aperture through which he entered. He therefore made his way up through the scuttle in the floor, and made his exit by the back door. He denied, when questioned by the watch, that he had entered the counting room in the second story. He also said, he was in the employ of Messrs Bunstead & Son, and had been for 7 months past. On his way to the watch-house, he contrived to drop a small bone, which was immediately picked up by Jordan. At the watch-house, he was searched, and a piece of candle, a flint, a piece of punk, and a pen-knife, on the back of which sparks could be produced with great facility, as was proved by an experiment in court.

On the examination, it was testified that the handkerchief could not have been dropped as alleged by Parks; that he could have come out at the place he entered; that he did not work at Bunstead's, but did work at Mr Murrays' brush manufactory. The bone was identified by B. F. Mimer, employed in the store, as one given to him by Mr Cotton, and having the name of "J. H. Cotton," marked on it. This bone having been left in the counting room, it was clear that Parks must have been up there. He was therefore committed for trial at the Municipal Court.

GRAND BALLOON ASCENSION!
MR. LAURIAT would respectfully announce to the public generally, that he intends to take an Aerostatic Excursion in his large splendid balloon, on the 17th inst, being the celebration of that ever memorable day, June 17th, 1775. Ever anxious to gratify the curiosity, as well as to amuse, he solicits only from them the same liberality as heretofore bestowed on similar occasions. He has erected a new and spacious amphitheatre for this purpose, where all may be safely accommodated who honor him with their patronage, to witness the ascension, opposite the Washington Hotel, Washington st, near Roxbury.
The doors will be opened at half past two, and at five o'clock precisely, Mr. L. will take leave of his friends and patrons. During the inflation, a variety of miniature balloons will be let off for the amusement of the Spectator. He has engaged the New England Band, being their first appearance before the Boston public, in uniform, who have selected a variety of new and appropriate Music. No cannon will be discharged as on former occasions.
